

We live in one of the most prosperous regions in North America. Still, more than 11,500 people in Red Deer live in poverty – 2,300 of them are children. Throughout Central Alberta there are thousands of more individuals and families living in low income conditions.

We invite you to take a bold step: put yourself in the shoes of someone living in poverty. Discover what it's like not to have enough income to meet basic needs.

What is a Poverty Simulation?

It is a unique and powerful experience which challenges perceptions, changes perspectives and strengthens understanding and empathy.

During this event, participants experience a month of living in poverty, based on the lives of real families here in Central Alberta. Volunteers populate the simulation as business owners, teacher, police officers, agency workers, service providers and government employees, allowing the participants to experience a full range of encounters, obstacles and challenges.
